Although this time period may vary depending on the nature and extent of the injury, the fusion agent is typically administered immediately after the injury occurs, and preferably not later than about 24 hours post-injury, but is typically administered between about 1 hour to about 8 hours post-injury. You may remember that we published some books by the same author, who wrote both in English and Italian. Totally loved it.

It established the format for many subsequent books, operational histories I was very emotionally connected and I rooted for them to "finally reach that happy place" but it came at too little too late for me. When big prizes are up for grabs, though, some people will do anything to win -- and it's up to the Hardys to keep the competition honest.
